

The International John Bunyan Society

Early Career Essay Prize 2022

Please send all submissions by 1 May 2022 to the Society's General Secretary, Dr Robert W. Daniel, via IJBSSecretary@outlook.com

Submissions for the Society's Early Career Essay Prize 2022 are now invited

Deadline: 1 May 2022

The annual International John Bunyan Society (IJBS) Early Career Essay Prize recognises the cutting-edge research of junior scholars in the field of early modern religion and dissent.

Criteria:

- The competition is open to PhD students and post-doctoral researchers up to two years after their viva.
- To be eligible, applicants MUST be members of the IJBS. Membership enquiries/subscriptions can be made via the Society's UK Treasurer: r.c.adcock@keele.ac.uk.
- Applicants can submit an essay of up to 8,000 words (e.g. part of a chapter or a draft of an article or a written version of a conference paper) by 1 May 2022 (as an email attachment). The word count includes footnotes, but excludes title, bibliography and any appendixes (which, however, should not be longer than the text of the essay).
- The name of the author, their affiliation and their role (e.g. final-year PhD student) as well as the word count should be indicated on the title page.
- A brief biography outlining the applicant's current research project (150 words) is to be included.

This year the IJBS particularly welcomes contributions discussing the spatial and spiritual geographies of religious Dissenters during the Long Reformation (global perspectives are especially welcome). All submissions will be judged by members of the Society's Executive Committee who may ask other experts to join them. Candidates will be informed of the outcome by email within a month of the submission date. The winner will be officially announced at the next IJBS Triennial Conference at Northumbria University (7-9 July 2022). The winner will receive a certificate, a financial award of £300, one year's free membership to IJBS and a year's subscription to the Society's peer-reviewed journal: Bunyan Studies.

Please send all submissions by 1 May 2022 to the Society's General Secretary, Dr Robert W. Daniel, via IJBSSecretary@outlook.com.

This prize is supported by our institutional partners:

